SPECIAL SESSION SURE, SAY WILSON'S FRIENDS

Expect Positive Announcement That He Will Call Congress to Meet in April.

GOVERNOR PLANS VACATION

Sidesteps Question Regarding Second Term, Praises Ambassador Bryce and Receives a Live Eagle.

[By Telegraph to The Tribune.]

The special session question is the one his future. thing uppermost in Mr. Wilson's mind just now. He is in a quandary as to just what to do, and as evidence of his intense interest in the subject he asked the ready expressed a public opinion either getting peeved about it to-day. for or against the proposition. When it was suggested that perhaps Mr. Bryan, is now in Washington, would soon visit here, Mr. Wilson asserted he had no appointment with him Among those in Mr. Wilson's confidence there is a feeling that he will not keep the people of the country in the dark much longer as to his plans. In fact, they look for the positve announcement within the next fortnight that he has decided to call Congress together to take action or the tariff question not later than the mid-

That Mr. Wilson is wavering In his original determination not to say anything definite as to a special session until he returns from his vacation was shown in his conversation with the newspaper "Of course, I don't see any public need for announcing my decision now." he said, "except, perhaps, to quiet any speculation as to whether there is tors going to be early action or not. I had fully intended to wait before annowhat I was going to do until after I got hear and read opinions in the mean time. It is very interesting, the consensus of nion on the extra session."

Regular Session Too Far Away.

When he was asked if what he referred to was the oninions in favor af a special session he answered significantly: "Yes; and these opinions have impressed me much." Mr. Wilson also referred to the length of time between the election of President and the convening of Congress, and declared the time was too long In the mean time the demand amon prominent Democrats of the country for special session grows stronger and stronger, and it is not believed Mr. Wilson can withstand the pressure for some ment regarding an extra session until after he starts on his vacation. But a special session of Congress is just as silent now as he was during his campaign as to that particular plank in the Democratic platform pledging the canit at all.

When a Tribune reporter showed him a telegram containing the information that he was quoted in an evening paper as saying "Of course I shall recommend everything contained in the Democratic platform," and asking about another term, he read it carefully and then replied: "Why, that refers to the programme in New Jersey.'

In referring to his plans in New Jersey Governor Wilson outlined an ambitious programme. He said he would urge particularly the passage of the income tax amendment to the Constitution, also an amendment providing for the direct election of United States Senators by the people. In addition, he would particular ly urge the calling together of a constitutional convention.

Governor Wilson expects to name along with the other members of his Cabinet an executive for the proposed Department

"I hope there will be a new member of the Cabinet for the Department of La-bor," he said. "It will be a very important selection to make. Everybody confidently expects it, and I have been told that all sides in Congress favor the new department. The immediate creation of the department is, of course, dependent on the action of the approaching session of Congress. I suppose the name of the present Department of Commerce and Lafor will have to be changed."

Mr. Wilson is not sure now that he holds some of the opinions contained in the books he has written. He said so this evening when his "Congressional Government" was under discussion. "That book was written when I was twenty-eight Years old," he said. "I haven't read it since, and I don't know whether or not I have changed my opinions since then." Mr. Wilson to-night made known his plans as arranged thus far between now and inauguration day, one of the features of which is his determination, if possible to spend his next birthday, on December 28, at his birthplace at Staunton, Va. Mr. Wilson will be in Virginia about that time made to take part in the old home week celebration at his birthplace.

May Visit White House.

The only other appointments Mr. Wilson has-and he asserted these were made be fore he was nominated-are the dinners of the Southern Society in New York next month and of the Commercial Club ir

Mr. Wilson spoke in glowing terms of James Bryce, the retiring British Ambassador, who he said, "has more detailed knowledge of unexpected things than any one I know." He added that Mr. Bryce was "the most accomplished questioner in the world. Everywhere he goes he asks intelligent questions and retains the answers. He has the greatest fund of information on things in the whole world that I ever heard of."

Though many cases of mental trouble belonged properly to a state hospital, for some classes of mental diseases hospital treatment was not the best kind of treat-ent, Dr. Gregory said. These patients became "institutionalized," he said, and the quiet routine life of the hospital tended to the development of unhealthy mental and physical habits, and as life in an institution was so different from that in the outside world, patients were unable to adjust themselves after their discharge from the hospital. It would be more logical and profitable, he said, to treat such patients under normal and natural surroundings at home. He suggested a tentative plan for the extension of social work in this direction. Social service centres ought to be established in various parts of the city and should be in organic relation with the social service department of the hospital. Patients discharged from psychopathic, decholic and other wards should be referred with their hospital record to the branch nearest their homes, and in this manner should receive the attention they needed.

Miss Adele S. Poston, superintendent of nurses at Bloomingdale Hospital, read a paper on nursing in mental disorders, and Miss Katharine Tucker, of the committee on mental hygiene of the State Charities Aid Association, spoke on nurses' peration with mental hygiene work.

Miss Tucker said that nursing in state ospitals was not what she would wish it to be, and that there was great need of attracting toward the nursing of mental diseases as good a type as was entering the profession of nursing. The trouble was, she said, that the old superstitious Methodist Foreign Board Befeeling toward the insane seemed to linger among many people,
